

Presenting Your City Map of

LAFAYETTE

Louisiana

CATHEDRAL of ST. JOHN, THE EVANGELIST — LAFAYETTE
Remarkable for its striking architecture and its beautifully executed interior.
Century old oak trees on its grounds add to its beauty.

LAFAYETTE PARISH COURT HOUSE

LAFAYETTE is located in the geographical center of South Louisiana. It is the center of one of the world's richest oil producing areas. It is also the center of a very rich agricultural area. Four of the major money crops of Louisiana are grown in Lafayette and the surrounding parishes. These are rice, sugar cane, cotton and sweet potatoes.

Many new industries have chosen Lafayette for plant sites because of its location, climate, unspoiled labor supply, electrical power, natural gas, raw materials, and market. Its industries include many establishments engaged in the production of finished and semi-finished products, both agricultural and non-agricultural.

The chief manufacturing industries are canning, seafood, creamery products, bakery products, millwares, brick and concrete products, metal windows and most products.

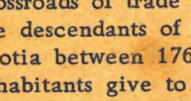

Lafayette is a distribution center for building material, electrical appliances, oil and gasoline, coffee, automotive parts, canned foods, bakery products, beverages, drugs, rice, sugar and dairy products.

LAFAYETTE CITY HALL

Situated on the banks of the Vermilion River, and at the crossroads of trade in South Louisiana is Lafayette whose natives are descendants of the Acadians, exiled by England from Nova Scotia between 1760 and 1770. These descendants of the early Scottish immigrants give to the City an atmosphere not found anywhere else in the United States. Many of its people speak French (a native patois that differs somewhat from the pure French) and English. This dual language, when noted in connection with the natural vivacity of the French, makes Lafayette a place that the visitor, who does more than just drive through, well remembers.

LAFAYETTE is rich in romantic and historic background. St. Martinville, the home of Evangeline (made famous by Longfellow's poem), is only a 15 minute drive from Lafayette. Tall cypress and giant oaks give it an exotic flavor of its own. Spanish moss hanging from the trees forms a tapestry which provides a beautiful background for the lazily flowing bayous and streams.

The City itself is noted for the beauty of its flowers. It is truly the Azalea City of Louisiana. In the late winter and early spring every street is bedecked with Azaleas. At the height of their blooming season (usually the first two weeks in March), a 30 mile Azalea Trail is opened to visitors, giving a display of color unmatched for beauty.

Sportsman's Paradise

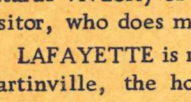

The finest hunting, fishing and boating can be had in the bayous, streams and lakes surrounding Lafayette. Deep sea fishing is available in the Gulf of Mexico, 65 miles south of the city.

Dining Pleasure

Added to the attractions of Lafayette and surrounding territory are the delicious dishes that are served. The reader may never have tasted the native French dishes such as Rice Dressing, Crayfish Bisque, Gumbo, or Court-Bouillon and Jambalya. But if you ever have the opportunity, you will not forget this pleasure.

Situated on the banks of the Vermilion River, and at the crossroads of trade in South Louisiana is Lafayette whose natives are descendants of the Acadians, exiled by England from Nova Scotia between 1760 and 1770. These descendants of the early inhabitants give to the City an atmosphere not found anywhere else in the United States. Many of its people speak French (a local patois that differs somewhat from the pure French) and English. This dual language, when noted in connection with the natural vivacity of the French, makes Lafayette a place that the visitor, who does more than just drive through, well remembers.

LAFAYETTE is rich in romantic and historic background. St. Martinville, the home of Evangeline (made famous by Longfellow's poem), is only a 15 minute drive from Lafayette. Tall cypress and giant oaks give it an exotic flavor of its own. Spanish moss hanging from the trees forms a tapestry which provides a beautiful background for the lazily flowing bayous and streams.

The City itself is noted for the beauty of its flowers. It is truly the Azalea City of Louisiana. In the late winter and early spring every street is bedecked with Azaleas. At the height of their blooming season (usually the first two weeks in March), a 30 mile Azalea Trail is opened to visitors, giving a display of color unmatched for beauty.

Dining Pleasure

Added to the attractions of Lafayette and surrounding territory are the delicious dishes that are served. The reader may never have tasted the native French dishes such as Rice Dressing, Crayfish Bisque, Gumbo, or Court-Bouillon and Jambalya. But if you ever have the opportunity, you will not forget this pleasure.
